The Nursing profession provides a wide range of diversity in terms of work settings. Nurses work in acute care and rehabilitation hospitals, community agencies and schools, research, clinics and physicians' offices. The Baccalaureate of Science in Nursing program at Newman provides the foundational stepping stone for graduate school. Many graduates further their education as Advanced Registered Nurse Practitioners in the Clinical Nurse Specialist, Nurse Practitioner, Nurse Anesthetist and Nurse Midwife roles. According to the Journal of the American Medical Association, by the year 2020 there will be 400,000 fewer nurses available to provide care than will be needed.
